

Dear Sir/Madam,

I hereby apply for the job as Quality Assurance

I am a humble person with a great passion for Testing, Mapping and Automation who is looking for a company where I can develop professionally, but also have the opportunity to share my interests with like-minded - and I therefore choose to look up to you!

What do I do now and what are my experiences?

Today I work part time, I have finished my education as a Developer from Code-institute and Software tester from the IT University and taken certification as ISTQB. I'm looking for a job as Quality safer, I have chosen to continue studying as an Agile -Test automator at the IT University meanwhile I am looking for a job, a role that includes automation tools that are relevant for the time being system / application and be able to justify their choice and use different test tools in the process.

I learn to apply modern development processes that have tests in focus such as BDD, TDD and ATDD in the test work. After the course, as a student I will be able to create driveable automated test cases with accompanying documentation. The purpose is to streamline the testing process using automatic tests. The role places high demands on structure, efficiency - that I am one team players as well as good at working independently with their own projects.

I have developed a lot in working in projects where decision-making is required, be humble too workflow - from start to finished product, ability to turn locks into solutions and have one curiosity to learn more. Having a varied role is something I enjoy.

Working side by side with Test Leaders, Testers and Developers from around the world is both exciting and challenging. This has led to increased knowledge and increased interest in Quality insurance - but also how we can work sustainably and how we make customers happy ..

Why am I the one you're looking for?

Something I think is important when looking for a job is that the company breathes the same values as one yourself, a company you can feel proud to work for.

I can really see myself working for you. My background as an Entrepreneur, Developer, and Quality assurance at a similar company, as well as understanding and above all burning interest would result in a committed addition to you. Curiosity and the pursuit of constant development and learn more hope i can weigh heavily.

I am expectant of the opportunity to use my experience as an Entrepreneur, Developer and Quality Safer, to create meaningful relationships, both with the team and those involved stakeholders, and to lead meaningful projects. I look forward to talking more with you about this opportunity.

Sincerely,

HARKANWAL SINGH
